REMINISCENCES OF OUR PIONEER DAYS

Gleanings From the Records Left By Men Who Laid the Foundation of Our County.

Gas was used for illuminating purposes in Redwood City for the first time on the 20th of April, 1872. Prior to this several attempts had been made to induce parties to embark in the business of providing the town with lights, but it had been found that the expense of erecting and operating a coal gas plant would be more than the business could be shown to justify. Something more than a year before this time a substitute for coal gas had been introduced into the state and its use had been adopted in several places. In response to the last attempt, the Maxim Gas Company, a San Francisco concern which owned the patent rights for this section, made application for a franchise to lay their mains in the streets. Before acting upon the application for this franchise, John Crowley and H. Kincaid were appointed as a committee to go to San Leandro and Watsonville where plants were in operation and investigate the service at those places. Upon the return of the committee a favorable report was made and the franchise granted. This was followed immediately by the laying of mains and the plant was erected in the rear of Turner and Son's furniture store.

About this time Redwood City began to experience a small sized building boom, during which many new residences and several business buildings were added to the town. Among the first of the citizens to feel the spirit of enterprise was G. Plump, who had ranked as one of the decidedly successful merchants of the town. A short time before this Mr. Plump had retired from business with the avowed intention of going to Europe. After he had practically completed his arrangements to depart he changed his mind and concluded to invest in Redwood realty instead of carrying his wealth out of the country. With this determination he purchased three lots located between Main and Maple streets, upon which he began the erection of a brick building with a stone foundation, which he designed to occupy with a general merchandise store. In the rear of the building and facing Maple street, he also planned a substantial residence building.

Apparently early strawberries were something of a luxury at that time as the following news item of the day will indicate: "The first strawberries of the season sold in San Francisco at $1.25 per pound.

In the issue of the Gazette of May 4, 1872, is noted the birth of a son to Mr. and Mrs. James Crowe on the 2d of May, and two weeks later is noted the death of the child, which occurred on the 14th.

Efforts which had been under way for some time to secure the location of a boot and shoe factory in this town came to a satisfactory conclusion about the 1st of May, 1872, when a representative of the firm of Mason & Taylor, boot and shoe manufacturers of San Francisco, came here and after making a final inspection of the situation made definite announcement that the proposals of the people of Redwood City would be accepted and that before the end of the month work on the necessary buildings would be under way. Several other sections had been making strong efforts to secure the location of this factory in their midst, chief of which was the town of Sonoma, the people of which had offered to donate the necessary land and a bonus of $30,000. The advantages of rail and water transportation won the prize for this town in spite of the fact that the offer made the company here was simply the donation of the land and a very small subscription to the stock. To a large extent the securing of this enterprise was due to the work of J. V. Diller, who offered to give the concern a lot 50 by 100 feet located on Main street in the business section with the building on it.

The Gazette of May 18th, contains the following mention of the work on the new Catholic Church at Menlo Park: "The new Catholic Church at Menlo Park, corner of Ravenswood avenue and the County Road, on a one acre lot dedicated to purposes of the church, is in course of erection. The building is to be 36 by 70 feet, with spire 110 feet high; and its erection is under the supervision of Father Dempsey, a gentleman to whose energy and foresight is said to belong the credit of erecting all the Catholic churches in this county."

On the 14th of June, 1872, John E. Tate who was serving his second term as County Clerk, succumbed to the effects of a long illness and passed to his final rest. Deceased was but 33 years of age, and had never been married. He came to this county seven years before his death, then in ill health, and for a time was employed in the mercantile house of C. E. Kelly & Co. at Half-moon Bay. After being in the county less than four years, he was made a deputy clerk under John Ames, and so satisfactory were his services that at the close of Ames' term of office he was elected as Clerk by a very large majority and again elected for the second term. The funeral was held the following Sunday afternoon from the Congregational Church and was conducted by Redwood City Lodge of Odd Fellows of which he had been a member, and the funeral sermon was delivered by Rev. Mr. Jewett, the pastor of the church. H. B. Thompson, who had been deputy Clerk under Mr. Tate, was elected by the Supervisors to fill the vacancy in the office caused by the death.

COLONEL LOVELAND RELIES ON RECORD

Candidate For Railroad Commissioner Offers the Past as His Guarantee for Future.

The Railroad Commission of California should never be permitted to drop back into the condition of doing nothing which it occupied for so many years. Its activity for the past two years since the passage of the Wright Law giving the Commission greater power and appropriating funds for its expenses, has shown that it can be of great assistance to the shippers of California. This activity of the commission dates from the appointment of Col. H. D. Loveland who was appointed by Gov. Gillett to succeed A. M. Wilson of San Francisco.

Col. Loveland brought the Commission just the knowledge and experience necessary for effective and helpful work in the interest of shippers. Educated in the law, he preferred commercial life and for twenty-five years has been connected with some of the largest commercial interests of the Pacific Coast.

He was Traffic Manager of the Pacific jobbers and Manufacturers Association for two years and President of that organization six years, resigning after he was appointed Railroad Commissioner. As an officer of that Association he was associated with Wm. R. Wheeler, Manager, and Seth Mann, Attorney for the Triforce Association, A. L. Scott, Wakefield Baker and others, in the conduct of all of the important cases before the Interstate Commerce Commission involving the interests of the Pacific Coast.

Since he has been appointed on the Railroad Commission many important cases have been heard amongst others the following:

The Bridgeford Cunningham Lumber Co. vs. The McCould River Railroad Co.
State of California vs. The South San Pacific.
The State of California vs. The San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake.
The Pullman rate case and others.

The Bridgeford Cunningham case was the first ever decided by the Commission on the reasonableness of the rate, and the Commission reduced the rate 2 1/2 per cent which was finally accepted by the defendant carrier without appeal.

In the Southern Pacific case it was found that there had been discrimination between persons or places in six different instances but no fine could be assessed as former Commission had not obeyed the Constitution and established rates.

One rate was found to have been established in the Santa Fe case and this road was fined five thousand dollars. Suit to collect this is now on in the Superior Court of San Francisco, Department 5.

In the Pullman case the Commission secured an amicable adjustment with this Company greatly to the advantage of the traveling public. Contemplated advances in sleeping car rates were prevented and eighty-nine reductions were made. But one advance was permitted, and that was necessary to conform to an interstate rate.

The Board at present is composed of A. C. Irwin, Sacramento; Col. H. D. Loveland, San Francisco; and Theodore Summerland of Los Angeles. All are candidates for reelection.

Col. Loveland has announced himself as a candidate on his record and invites the closest investigation and scrutiny.

Voters should realize that this is a judicial position and that experience and legal knowledge are necessary to a proper discharge of the duties of Railroad Commissioner.

CITY OFFICIAL PAPER

D. E. O'KEEFE, Editor and Proprietor

Time for the Voter to Act.

Although the date of the primary election is still some distance in the future, the time is at hand when others beside those seeking office should begin to give serious attention to matters political. One of the undesirable features of the best of direct primary laws is that we must of necessity face a rather extended political campaign. This to the average voter, as well as to the office seeker, is not altogether a pleasant prospect, but under the circumstances, it is a duty which must be faced. If the direct primary is to be made the success which is hoped, the people generally must give the important matter of the selection of party candidates their careful attention. The determination of the material of which the tickets are to be composed must not be left to the seeker for the polls and the professional politician.

This should appeal with especial force to the members of the Republican party in San Mateo County. As members of the dominant party in the county there is no reason why they should not dominate the management of its affairs, and every reason why they should. If this is to be done, however, care must be taken in the selection of the ticket. Every member of the party must devote himself to the interests of the public, and must do his share to see that none but the best of material is selected to represent the party at the final contest. The material from which to make selection is abundant, and the opportunity for selection is in the hands of the voter. Let every Republican do his duty at the primaries and a ticket will be presented which will receive the support of a vast majority of the voters.

That men of small ability or questionable standing will endeavor to take advantage of the party strength in the hope of securing a lucrative or attractive position, can be taken for granted. Care must be taken to see that the designs of men of this character are thwarted.

READY FOR ANOTHER PUBLIC IMPROVEMENT

Council Orders Call for Bids for Construction of New Bridge Over Redwood Creek.

While the adjourned meeting of the City Council on Wednesday evening was unusually short, continuing but little more than an hour, several matters of more than ordinary public importance were disposed of. Chief among these was the taking of definite action looking to the immediate construction of the long contemplated bridge over Redwood Creek at the foot of East Bradford street. All of the Trustees were present when Clerk Plump called the roll. No one appeared to make objection to the work of Messrs. McGarvey & Kretz in the construction of the sewers called for in their contract for the improvement of the streets in district 14, and as the work was approved by the Inspector and Street Superintendent Dickey it was accepted and the claim for $2,753.65 was allowed and ordered paid out of the funds of district No. 14.

In a communication from Dr. Taggart, its secretary, the Council was notified of the tentative organization of the Board of Health and the selection of its officers. Dr. J. L. Ross, the Health Officer, was present as a representative of the Board and called attention to some of the defects in the present ordinances. City Attorney Mansfield was directed to prepare a new ordinance providing for the organization of the Board in accordance with the provisions of the present State laws. As soon as this is done, the Council will designate the remaining members of the board of Health.

The presentation for approval of the map of Homestead Addition, being a subdivision of lot 48 of the Reese tract, brought out a renewal of the protests of the Trustees against the practice of cutting tracts from that section of the city into small lots. Trustee Hynding again urged his objection to the 25-foot lots, characterizing them as not only a serious detriment to the improvement of the city but as an attempt at imposition upon innocent purchasers. Chairman Merrill regretted that the law prevented any effective action at this time, a feeling which was echoed by every member of the Council. Following his stand taken at the time of the approval of a previous tract, Trustee Hynding voted against the map, while the other Trustees voted for its approval in a manner that indicated their plain disapproval of the small lot plan.

City Attorney Mansfield presented an ordinance outlining the duties and providing for the salary of the new City mechanical and electrical engineer.

Trustee Sampson presented the plans and specifications for the proposed bridge at the foot of East Bradford street, and this brought forth the most important discussion of the evening. The plans and specifications are the same as those adopted at a previous meeting and later approved by the War Department, and as to these there was no question, all agreeing as to their sufficiency and practicability. It was as to the advisability of proceeding with the work at this time, that the slight difference of opinion which provoked the discussion was caused. When Trustee Sampson followed the presentation of the plans with a motion to instruct the Clerk to advertise for bids for the construction of the bridge, Trustee Hynding interposed the objection that in his opinion there was not sufficient funds in the treasury to permit of this expenditure without interposing with absolutely necessary repairs and the installation of the fire alarm system, both of which he considered of more importance than the building of the bridge. He was not in favor of building the bridge at this time, if to do this it would be necessary to forego the needed repairs to streets, especially to Mount street, which needed immediate attention to save it from utter ruin. While all agreed with the necessity for street repairs and the importance of the fire alarm system, it was the general opinion that the funds would suffice for all pressing purposes. It was also urged by Trustee Sampson that the city was offered at this time an opportunity to secure the bridge at an extremely small cost. The owners of the land needed for the approaches were now ready to donate it to the city, while the Tacoma Lumber Company was also willing to donate the necessary lumber, the large item in the cost of the bridge. The work, which had been under contemplation for more than six months, was delayed much longer these liberal offers might be withdrawn, and at some future time the entire expense would fall upon the tax payers. After some little discussion (Continued on Third Page.)

HIGH SCHOOL PUPILS RECEIVE DIPLOMAS

President L. P. Behrens Delivers
Strong Address to Class of Sequoia Graduates

The thirtieth annual commencement of Sequoia Union High School was held in the Alhambra last evening before a large number of parents and friends of the school. Professor McCrea opened the exercises by a few appropriate remarks.

After the rendition of the musical portion of the program Miss Edna Christensen delivered the Salutatory in a very able manner. She was followed by Lisle Winter who delivered an oration entitled "American Progress." Following is the address in full:

Three hundred years ago America was a vast wilderness. Less than a century and a half ago it passed into the hands of old England; and before the end of the 18th century we had broken away from England's control and had set up a government of our own.

It was indeed a precious heritage which was thus secured for Liberty; a land stretching from the frozen regions of the North, to the sun-kissed tropics, and from the stormy Atlantic to the tranquil Pacific; a land embracing almost every variety of climate, and soils capable of producing almost every product of the earth. Rich in mineral deposits, from the valuable mines, to beds of the most precious and useful metals. A land that pours out its streams of oil for burning, gas that can be used fresh from nature, the heat of the sun to its utility, and beds of pure salt that cover the earth like dust. In short, all that is necessary for the preservation and comfort of animal and human life, exists in the greatest abundance in this favored land.

Such is the land designed by God for the home of Liberty; and waiting millions across the sea are making every effort to find a home among us.

On the Pacific coast we can already hear the tramp of the incoming multitude. The poet has heard them too, for he says:

I hear the tread of pioneers
Of nations yet to be.
The first low wail, where soon
Shall roll a human sea.

The rudiments of empire here
Are plastic yet, and warm:
The chaos of a mighty world
Is rounding into form.

In the short space of three centuries the American people have grown from a small handful of hardy adventurers into a mighty continental nation, increasing with a rapidity that is truly marvelous. They have built up their civilization on a mighty scale of which they are justly proud.

They have covered the land with free and powerful states, and splendid cities, connected with a network of railways, telephones, telegraphs, navigable rivers and canals, which bind all the scattered parts into one throbbing whole.

They have developed a commerce and a system of manufactures comparable to that of any nation. They have created a literature which commands the respect and admiration of the world; and have illustrated their history with deeds of arms, not less splendid than their peaceful achievements; and have given to the world undying names in every walk of life.

The story of our country reads like a romance. Honors crowd its growing years. Great and good men have fought bravely and worked worthily for its progress; and it is no boast to claim that the dominating force in the council halls of the nations of the world today, is our own government.

The American people should strive to maintain this high standard and for this purpose the great need of the present day, is men ready to speak and act in defense of precious liberty, and in behalf of the down-trodden people: high minded pure-hearted men with personal integrity, whose private lives have been pure whose public lives are without taint, and whose pockets are not heavy with bribes; men who dare to do right at the call of duty; for on such depends the welfare of the nation that Washington made possible, and that Lincoln saved for us by making the states "one and inseparable."

The Valedictory was given by Margaret Winter.

State Superintendent of Schools, Edward Hyatt, delivered an able address that was closely listened to.

L. P. Behrens, president of the Board of Trustees, on presenting the diplomas to the graduates delivered the following appropriate speech:

This is a great educational age for young men and young women. In all parts of California as well as in other states, parents, with few exceptions, are endeavoring to give their children the benefits of a high school, or even more, a college education. Each year marks an increase in the number of graduates from high schools and colleges.

Never before has there been such a wide-spread and hearty support of interest in education. The educational system in its present development is striving to meet the needs of the individual, rather than making the individual conform to old requirements.

Grammar schools have broadened their courses of study, high schools have expanded their curriculums until their work is no longer limited to languages, history, and mathematics, but includes in addition science, manual training, domestic science and agriculture. You, during your four years of high school work have had offered to you many advantages which the boy or girl who either voluntarily or through compulsion have quit school at the end of the grammar grades have entirely lost.

You have the advantage of the knowledge you have gained from books, the influences and experiences resulting from companionship with your fellow students, and the ideas and ideals you have acquired through association with men and women of culture and education, therefore, if you have made the most of your opportunities, you are economically more valuable than the boy or girl who has not employed or profited by them. But this is merely the ground-work, as it were, for your future. If you have worked faithfully, you have accomplished much, but the future with all its problems still confronts you. Many of you may desire to pursue a course of higher education.

This wish is always laudable if actuated by a desire to get the best that higher education offers, not merely the name of having attended college or of being a college graduate.

Life for you will not consist alone in knowing things but in knowing how to do things. From books "those ever burning lamps of accumulated wisdom," you may learn the means to attain an end, but if you are to obtain the greatest benefit, and to be of most valuable service to the state, which is a right to claim your best efforts in return for the education it has provided you, you must work out your own problems and from your own resources find the solution of the difficulties.

If your paths never lead to a seat of higher learning make the world your college, study men and women, interest yourselves in the great question of the world; cultivate a love for good books—good books I say, for ten books judiciously selected are worth yards of hit or miss volumes.

So you who do not expect to go to college, admonish not to worry over the loss nor to waste time regretting the opportunities missed and achievements rendered impossible but to get to work firmly convinced that you can, and strongly determined that you will obtain through life itself as high and as broad an education as the general college graduate will possess.

In conclusion—in whatever course you may take for your future education, in whatever environment you may find yourself, be it the college, the office, the forge, or the farm cultivate in yourselves, concentration of purpose, application, perseverance, and an unbiased mind. Set for yourselves high standards and lofty ideals, incorporate into your lives those sterling qualities which make for strong rounded characters.

And now, members of the class of 1910, I have the pleasure of presenting to you in behalf of the Board of Trustees, not only our hearty congratulations and best wishes for your future, but also these diplomas which symbolize the successful completion of your four years of work in Sequoia Union High School.

The program was as follows:

Ready for Another Improvement

ing by Chairman Merrill and Trustees Brown of the finance committee, it was agreed that the cost of the work could easily be met at the time of its completion, and with this understanding Trustee Hynding withdrew his objection and Clerk Plump was directed to advertise for bids for the construction of the bridge by a unanimous vote.

Clerk Plump presented a list of the sites offered and suggested for the new city hall. At the suggestion of Chairman Merrill, the consideration of the list was laid over until the next meeting of the Council, on the evening of June 6th, when the Trustees will be glad to listen to any suggestions or arguments which citizens have to present. It was urged that all interested in this important matter should attend this meeting, when the question of location will be fully discussed.

Fire Chief Winter presented objections to a practice of several grocers, who he stated made a practice of allowing cans of coal oil without proper stoppers to remain upon the sidewalks. The Chief and Marshal were requested by the Council to enforce the ordinances which prohibited such practices and were assured of the support of the Trustees in any action they might take.

At the same time the Marshal was instructed to enforce the ordinance to prevent the allowing of drippings of oil from automobiles to fall upon the streets.

Clerk Plump was directed to advertise for a car load of water pipe for use in the Dinsge Park street improvement districts.

A communication was presented from the San Francisco Motor Club calling attention to a motor car to be given at Tanforan Park on the 29th and 30th of this month, for the benefit of a fund for the improvement of the roads in the first supervisor district and asking that the city contribute to the fund for prizes to be offered. The Trustees concluded that the city had no funds which could be used for the purpose of assisting Supervisor Cassey in caring for the roads of his district and the communication was sent to sleep on the files.

SCHOOL CENSUS IS SHY
Reports of Enumerators Show Some Falling Off in Enrollment

The County School Census this year has fallen off materially. From the complete returns of all of the School Districts of the county, Superintendent Cloud has compiled the following statement for us:

Number of families having children under 17 years, 3268. Number of boys between 5 and 17 years, 2863. Number of girls between 5 and 17 years, 2648. Total 5511. Number of children under 5 years, 2369 or a total of 7880 children under 17 years. Of this number 7537 are native born and 243 were born in foreign countries.

6 children are deaf, 3344 have not been vaccinated and 191 are gainfully employed.

There is a falling off of 61 families over last year and there are 279 census children less. The only school district which has gained a teacher is Montara. San Mateo, Redwood City, South San Francisco and Belmont have each lost so heavily as to lose the allotment for one teacher.

San Mateo is still the largest district in the County but there are 84 fewer children than in 1909. Redwood City has 613 children as against 675 last year.

Although the census has fallen off, the attendance in the schools is larger than last year and the city schools are all comfortably filled.

Big Game for Sunday.
Never has baseball so completely absorbed the interest of the people, as at the present time. The local team has played a series of games that no team could excel, and few equal. They have met the hardest amateur teams of the state and have defeated them.

The crowning efforts of this season's ball games was last Sunday, when the crack team of San Mateo fell before the local nine. The San Mateos took their defeat quietly, although they had been very confident of carrying away the honors this season, as they did for the last four seasons, but they ran up against a team that showed class, both as to individual players and team work. The team work was perfect, and the individual plays brilliant.

Never did Fox pitch better ball than Sunday. Al Becker, who has always been recognized as the wheel horse of the team was as cool as an iceberg. At the critical moment, when he had but one strike left, and when William was on third ready to tie the score, he made his last strike and sent the ball beyond the opposing team, thus tying the score. Beeger came next with one of his speedy runs that decided the game. The score was two to three.

Next Sunday the local team will meet the Studebakers.

There will be no game on Monday.

Out for District Attorney.
Harry E. Styles, the City Attorney, for South San Francisco, has announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for district attorney at the primaries in August. Harry has always been a staunch Republican and has been a worker in the ranks for eight years. He has been in general practice of the law for more than five years, during which time he has handled many important cases, both in this county and in San Francisco. He acquired his legal education at Stanford and after several years of hard study was admitted to the bar in 1905. He is the city attorney of South San Francisco and is also the attorney for the Public Administrator of this county. He has many friends throughout San Mateo County who are coming to his support. He solicits your support.
